Men's & women's boxing matches visit West Sac

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Boxing will return to West Sacramento – a community with a rich history in the sport – with a "fight night" scheduled for June 18 at Holy Cross Parish on Anna Street. The ticket will include appearances from noted retired local boxers such as the Savala brothers, Juan Lazcano, "Willie" Jorrin and Henry Rodriguez.

The ticket will also include women's boxing.

The event is partly a fundraiser for the Catholic parish and its private school, said promoter James Marzano of the Mateen Boxing club in Sacramento.

"Proceeds are benefiting the Holy Cross Parish and the boxing gym, and the parish's schools," Marzano told the News-Ledger. "What our main goal is here is to raise money to keep our youth active in positive programs such as the boxing program. We're trying to bring it back. West Sacramento used to be a fight town. A lot of old-school fighters used to be in West Sacramento."

Marzano didn't say what the charities' share of the ticket price would be, but ticket prices are $12 in advance (call 916-410-2647) or $15 at the door.

He said he hopes the event will draw 250 to 300 people.

Weigh-ins are from 9-11 a.m., and fights start at 3 p.m. at the facility at 1321 Anna Street.

Council approves higher utility rates

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The West Sacramento City Council approved a set of planned increases to local utility rates last week. But the council wasn't happy about doing it.

Councilman Oscar Villegas said that the increases were necessary, but were designed to take place over the next few years in "very small, very careful incremental increases that are not $7 or $8 a month, so people who can't afford it don't get hit with a big increase."

"Everybody on the council, we hate raising the rates, we really do," added colleague Bill Kristoff. "It's just a necessity of business. This is an 'enterprise fund,' so it needs to have enough money coming in to pay off expenses. . . This is something I can support, and this is something I think is fairly fair."

Greg Fabun, the city's public works manager, said that even after the increases, West Sacramento would still have among the best rates in the region for water, sewer and garbage services.

"Currently we are, based on the survey, the second-lowest in the region," said Fabun. "After phasing in these increases, we don't change our ranking – and in fact, we may improve our ranking if others raise their rates."

One of the reasons city staff believes it needs to charge more to residential and business customers is the slow economy. The "enterprise fund" covering these utilities has brought in less fee revenue from new development as income to the fund.

The city had already planned a 30-cent increase in sewer fees for residential customers during the next fiscal year. Beginning the year after that, the changes approved last week will incrementally add an additional $7.03 to the average residential customer's monthly bill, said a city staff report. Over several years, the average homeowner's bill will increase from $79.42 to $86.75 by mid-2015.

Commercial rates will also go up.

Only one citizen showed up to comment on the proposed increase. The woman identified herself as a mobile home park resident, and protested that the increase would be hard on fixed-income citizens who are also having to cope with other cost-of-living increases.

City approves state's plan for Indian center site

Questions remain about whether CIHC project can get past regulators' concerns about building on a Sac river levee

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A complex project to put a large state park site onto 43 acres in West Sacramento's northeast won strategic approval from the city council last week. Details of the plan for the California Indian Heritage Center still remain to be worked out, though.

And some state agencies, responding to the environmental impact report for the project, have raised concerns about developing the museum project on a river levee. It's not a certainty that the project can overcome those hurdles.

"The 43-acre property may not be developable," reported Jim Bermudez of the city's community development department.

But the council gave its blessing to the state's "general plan" for the park site, known as the CIHC, with a few conditions. The general plan comes after negotiation with the city and with some concerned residents, most of whom live in the nearby Rivers subdivision.

While approving it, West Sacramento officials asked for the plan to be clarified in several ways. They wanted to ensure that a planned parking facility at a former JTS property (near the Rivers subdivision) is fully screened from. And they wanted to ensure that the property is returned to local taxpayers if the state park idea fails. They also wanted to make sure it was on the record that property (now owned by the state) still owes the city a fee negotiated by a previous developer who closed a local golf course.

"If anything happens (to this project), I need to make sure we get that 43 acres back," said Bill Kristoff, the city's "mayor pro tem."

Councilman Mark Johannessen asked about the financial security of the project, saying, "we have state parks closing as we speak." He asked how much of the CIHC's costs will be paid for by private contributions, as opposed to state money.

In reply, Catherine Taylor, a district superintendent in the state parks department, said that the CIHC "has statewide importance, and probably won't be targeted for closure." She said the parks department hopes to attract at least 50 percent of the project's costs from private money – it will seek 100 percent private financing, "but that's probably not feasible."

City staff believes that the issues involving the outside regulatory issues and the levee – the issues that affect whether or not the site can be developed – won't be settled until 2014.

The council's approval of the CIHC general plan last Wednesday marked the final time the council would be able to have a voice on the strategic design of the property.

13-year prison sentence for hate crime

The main assailant in the assault last November on a Sikh taxi driver in West Sacramento was sentenced last week to 13 years in state prison by Yolo County Judge Timothy Fall.

42-year old Pedro Ramirez pled 'no contest' to a felony assault charge, admitting that the attack was a "hate crime."

Another suspect, 33-year old Johnny Morales, Jr., of West Sacramento, pled "no contest" to felony assault and was sentenced to felony probation for playing a "lesser role in the attack," said the Yolo County District Attorney's office.

Early in the morning of Nov. 28, taxi driver Harbhajan Singh drove the pair and their wives from the Harlow's nightclub in Sacramento to the Broderick neighborhood in West Sacramento. Singh was wearing the traditional beard and turban of the Sikhs.

According to the D.A.'s office, Ramirez and Morales demanded a fare lower than the $14 requested by Singh.

"Mr. Singh was momentarily reluctant, but then turned to give Morales the additional change he requested," said a statement from Jonathan Raven, Chief Deputy District Attorney. "At that point, Ramirez shouted racial epithets, accused Mr. Singh of being a Muslim, and punched Mr. Singh in the face approximately ten times while Morales punched him from behind."

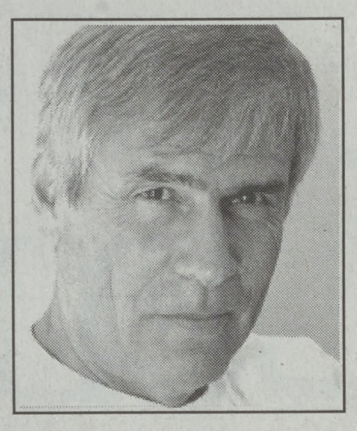
Singh was badly hurt. Ramirez tried to pull him from the car, but Singh was seat-belted in.

"Ultimately, the wife of Ramirez stopped the beating by throwing her body between Mr. Singh and her husband," said the D.A.'s office. Singh escaped.

The crime was initially reported as a simple assault, but later classified as a "hate crime" that drew regional attention.

The worst 'bad hair day' ever

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Being a guy, I have never quite figured out why women are so into their hair. I mean, other than a flat-top haircut I had for a year or so back when I was a teenager and all my friends had one, too, my hair has always looked (and been cut) pretty much the same. Plus I never put any time or effort into taking care of it. I just wash it in the morning, run a comb through it before I run out the door to work, and it more or less dries on its own and I don't think about it for the rest of the day. But for all the women I know, concern and care for their hair is a much more complicated matter. And it apparently starts at a very young age.

For instance, back when my daughter was a teenager, she once stuck her head out of the bathroom and screamed, "Dad, get in here! Now!"

The terror in her voice made me leap out of my chair and hurry to her side. "What's the matter?" I asked with concern as she stood next to the shower with a towel wrapped around her head, staring down with disbelief into the bathtub.

"Look at that," she cried out, pointing down to the drain. "Can you believe it?"

"What am I looking for?" I asked. "Blood, a giant spider, what?"

"Look at all that dead hair! I'm going bald!"

"But it's just a little hair in the drain," I tried to assure my panic-stricken daughter. "That happens to everyone after they wash their hair."

"A little hair?" she shouted, looking at me like I was blind. "The drain is completely clogged with it, and this has been going on for weeks! Enough is enough. I will die if I'm going bald! I'm calling a doctor!"

Anyway, to make a long story short, my daughter did go to a doctor about her hair loss and he assured her that she was just a typical teenage girl stressing out about school and boys and that everything would be just fine. But from that day forward, she was always checking her pillow, her clothes, and even her car seat, determined to keep track of any possible hair loss. She even stopped wearing hats and absolutely refused to let any other human being touch her hair. She also carefully went through our family tree to make sure no one had passed any bald genes down to her.

Over the years, I've ran into other examples of women being overly concerned with both the health and appearance of their hair. One loves the ocean but doesn't like to go there because it makes her hair more curly and frizzy that normal. Another has been going to the very same hairdresser for 30 years, a lady who is now in bad health, and she once told me, "If Connie (the woman who does her hair) ever drops dead, my life is over!" And a third treats the name of the color she uses to dye her hair like it's a state secret.

So, I learned a long time ago that their hair is very important to most women, which finally brings me to my little story.

A woman I know, who told me she will kill me if I use her real name in this column, likes to go on long walks late at night. And a few weeks ago she accidentally came across what turned out to be the well-camouflaged nest of a female raccoon and two cute little raccoon babies. For whatever reason, they didn't seem particularly frightened of her and it wasn't long before she was dropping off little treats for the baby raccoons to eat. In the process, she became quite friendly with the whole raccoon family and actually starting feeling pretty protective towards them. So imagine her horror the other night when she spotted a big old owl circling menacingly over the raccoon nest.

"That owl was definitely up to no good," my friend told me, "and he knew that I was on to him. So he kept going from tree branch to tree branch, just sitting there waiting for me to leave. And when I wouldn't, do you know what he did?"

"What?" I asked with interest.

"He swooped down, flew right over the top of me, and pooped on my head!"

When I stopped laughing, I asked my friend if she really thought that an owl had deliberately pooped on her head and she replied with conviction, "Absolutely!"

"So then what did you do?" I asked with interest.

"I screamed."

"How come?"

"Because it was unlike any other bird poop I had ever seen or felt in my whole life! It was thick in places and runny in others and it had blood and little bones in it, too. And when I reached up and touched it I thought I was going to barf."

"So then what did you do?"

"I ran!"

"Where?"

"I ran back home, threw off all my clothes, and jumped right into the shower. Then I washed my hair six times until I was absolutely sure I had gotten all of that gross owl poop out of it. I'm telling you, it was one of the worst experiences of my entire life!"

Later that night, when I told my daughter about my friend who had been pooped on by an angry owl and how she had screamed and raced home and washed her hair six times, I also asked her if she would have reacted pretty much the same way.

"Well," said my daughter, "I definitely would have screamed, but I would have never run home."

"Really? How come?"

"Because I would have dropped dead right there on the spot!"

'That owl was definitely up to no good,' my friend told me, 'and he knew that I was on to him. So he kept going from tree branch to tree branch, just sitting there waiting for me to leave. And when I wouldn't, do you know what he did?'

Yolo County budget: modest increase

The County of Yolo last week released its recommended budget for fiscal year 2011/12.

A hearing on the budget is scheduled for June 14 (as well as June 15 and 16, if needed). Total recommended expenditures for the budget year are $312,600,314, with general purpose revenues of $58,805,309 and capital expenditures of $2,486,752. The net operating budget of $275,689,223 (total budget less internal transfers, capital projects and debt service) represents an increase of $768,017 (0.2%) from 2010/11.

The 2011/12 recommended budget is balanced and includes minimal layoffs, according to county officials. Once final action on the state budget is taken, though, it is possible additional layoffs by the County of Yolo may be necessary.

"This budget reflects known revenue and expenditure projections for the 2011/12 budget year, including

Honored for volunteering

ABOVE: The West Sacramento City Council on Wednesday presented a proclamation to leaders of the local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in recognition of efforts to improve three West Sacramento parks this spring. The church's day of service, April 30, attracted 1,200 church members and citizen volunteers, who planted trees and plants, cleaned up 100 acres of parklands, renovated Little League fields and one basketball court, painted facilities, and installed fountains, benches and picnic tables. West Sacramento's Alyce Norman, Bryte and River Walk parks benefitted from the improvements, valued in excess of $100,000. Less than 7 pounds of garbage from first farmers' market

The new West Sacramento Farmers Market is doing pretty well as a "zero waste" event, says the city's trash and recycling service vendor.

"Waste Management is proud to report that more than 95 percent of the waste generated at the market was diverted from local landfills!," said a company press release from Waste Management, Inc.

The company tallied the garbage, compost and recycling bin contents from the inaugural market on May 19, hosted by the local chamber of commerce at a West Capitol site.

"In total, 136.6 pounds of material were collected," said Waste Management. "The majority of the material was composted (103.4 pounds) and most of the remaining material was recycled (35.2 pounds), leaving very little waste (6.8 pounds)!"

The event organizers instructed vendors to bring nothing that couldn't be recycled or composted – utensils made of compostable materials, for example, were encouraged.

The market continues on Thursday evenings from about 4:30 p.m. to dusk across from city hall.

the initial expected loss of vehicle license fee revenue. It does not include any other speculative state budget-related adjustments," said Patrick Blacklock, Yolo County Administrator, in a press release. "More work is yet to be done as the recommended budget is a temporary bridge until passage of the state budget. The Board of Supervisors, fiscal staff, department heads, labor representatives, employees and external stakeholders are to be commended for their efforts to date to collaboratively and constructively develop a balanced budget in a continuing difficult economic climate."

Fiscal year 2011/12 will be the fourth year of a net decline in operations since the onset of the recession. Since the peak in 2007/08, revenues and expenditures have dropped by $14.2 million (4%) and the number of funded positions has dropped by 448 (25%). The number of Yolo County employees per 1,000 residents continues to be the lowest in more than 20 years, reports the county. In 2011/12, reduced public hours and various department closures will continue, especially during the winter holidays.

Once adopted, the recommended budget will serve as the interim spending plan until the adopted budget hearing can be completed following adoption of the state's 2011/12 budget. Other uncertainties which warrant preserving remaining reserves and maintaining an operating contingency include uncertain indigent healthcare costs; unemployment costs; Delta-related analysis and advocacy; unknown assessment appeals outcomes; potential changes to grant funded mission critical programs; the loss of federal stimulus funding; and the uncertainty associated with the state budget.

The 2011/12 recommended budget is available online at www.yolocounty.org. To receive a copy of the budget, contact Beth Gabor, Yolo County Public Information Officer at (530) 666-8042.

State buys Woodland site for new Yolo courthouse

The State of California closed escrow on a new site for a Yolo County courthouse in Woodland last week, with a $2.52 million payment to the Redevelopment Agency of the City of Woodland. Former occupants of that city block (bounded by Main, Fifth, and Sixth Streets and Lincoln Avenue have been relocated), reports the Judicial Council of California.

The Woodland Redevelopment Agency expedited the state's purchase of the land by assembling various properties on the block, and then sold the land to the state. This arrangement enabled the courthouse to remain in downtown Woodland.

Officials in Yolo County have long deemed the aging courthouse on Court Street to be inadequate – and hard to keep secure.

"We're delighted to pass yet another milestone on our journey to build a new courthouse for the citizens of this county," said Presiding Judge David Rosenberg, in a press release from the Judicial Council. "Now we move into the serious task of designing a signature building that will fit well into the fabric of the Woodland community."

Shawn Landry, Assistant Court Executive Officer, added, "We thank the City, Administrative Office of the Courts, and local court leaders that were able to facilitate closing this deal and keeping the courthouse where it has historically been and where we are glad it will stay; downtown Woodland."

The partnership of Fentress Architects and Dreyfuss & Blackford Architects will design the building. Preliminary plans, the first phase of architectural design during which the building's layout and appearance will be developed, is expected to take six months.

The new 14-courtroom courthouse will be approximately 163,000 square feet, consolidating seven unsafe and overcrowded court facilities into a single building, with adjacent parking. The AOC is also finalizing negotiations with Union Pacific Railroad for a parking lot to accommodate 220 cars at Lincoln Avenue and Sixth Street, across the street from the new courthouse.

Construction is scheduled to start in early 2013. The courthouse project, with a total estimated cost of $165.3 million, is scheduled for completion in late 2014 or early 2015. The new Woodland courthouse is among 41 projects funded by Senate Bill 1407 (2008), which finances critically needed courthouse construction, renovation, and repair through a portion of judicial branch fees, penalties, and assessments. These projects do not draw from the state's General Fund.

maintenance not to answer any e-mails. There is obviously a communication problem that complicates the maintenance issues.

A substitute custodian at RCHS earns approximately $13 per hour, certainly an expense the district can afford. As evidence, at the last school board meeting, another district administrator was hired to join the existing fleet of highly-paid problem solvers. If we could exchange just one administrator for substitute custodians, we would have enough employees to keep the River City campus sparkling clean with ample time to even polish the doorknobs.

District administrators are able to talk and call meetings, and so I have heard all the excuses from the director of maintenance, assistant superintendent of business services, and the superintendent of schools. Most recently, on June 2nd, I met with the superintendent. To his credit, he is the polite one, but he did not commit to solving the problem. When I pressed him to do so by the start of the fall term, his response was, "Don't back me into a corner!"

While I do not want to back anyone into a corner, especially any of the filthy ones at River City, I do expect more. The River City High School campus is a beautiful gift from the dedicated, hard-working taxpayers of West Sacramento, and neglect will prematurely ruin the school. District administrators have the responsibility to be good stewards of the campus and to provide the staff and students with the conditions and communication we respectfully deserve.

OPINION

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL:

Legs

They say a news story has "legs" if it just won't go away; if, after it is first reported, the continues to be echoed and amplified and expounded upon by other reporters in other media for some time to come.

Evidently, a story about legs can get a leg up on becoming a story with legs. Let's explain:

Last month, reports your own Sacramento television station News 10, the yearbooks at River City High were released. The books included some slightly catty discussion by a student reporter about the shortness of the cheerleaders' uniform skirts, including a remark that the team "showed more leg than Daisy Duke." The story was accompanied by photos of the team in their short skirts.

(The News-Ledger had to look up "Daisy Duke." Apparently she's the scantily-clad female character in the 'Dukes of Hazzard' television franchise. Perhaps you already knew that.)

Anyway, this kind of commentary can hurt feelings, especially when printed in somebody's high school yearbook. And this comment did hurt some feelings.

Some cheerleaders protested the mockery. The writer apologized. After the first few hundred copies of the book went out the door, school officials said they would remove the offending pages from the rest. As far as what happened at RCHS, that's pretty much the end of it.

But in the outside world, it wasn't the end.

News 10 broke this news story, helpfully including close-ups of yearbook photos of the cheerleaders' legs, and publishing a story and photos on the station's website.

Okay. But what surprised us is where the story turned up next.

A correspondent directed us to a copy of a similar story online. This time, it was in the London Daily Mail. That tabloid-style organization basically rewrote the News 10 story about the RCHS cheerleaders, in the best tradition of hack writing. The Daily Mail also published the leg shots of the cheerleaders (no doubt for journalistic reasons, as News 10 surely did).

Particularly on the Internet, this kind of sensationalist re-writing often substitutes for real journalism, and readers flock to it.

Here's the Daily Mail's online headline, which is in no danger of understating the short-skirt crisis in West Sacramento: "'More leg than Daisy Duke': Cheerleaders' outrage at cruel article accusing them of wearing short skirts."

Were the "outrage" and "cruelty" of a magnitude that need reporting halfway around the world? Really?

Anyway, the "legs" of this story somehow took it from RCHS to the Sacramento region and then to the land of Mary Poppins and David Beckham (although, considering the story was posted on the Internet at least twice, it's no doubt been read in a lot of even more exotic locations).

Now, the News-Ledger is writing about it. You could argue that the News-Ledger is just continuing to give this story more "legs," and you'd be right. The only thing missing here are more close-ups of the young women's thighs.

Letters to the Editor

Don't pay for arena

RE: "Should West Sacramento contribute to a King's Arena?," News-Ledger, June 1:

The simple answer is, absolutely not. The new arena is a vanity project of Sacramento's single-issue mayor and a lucrative proposition for the Maloof's and a handful of influential developers. Mr. Johnson sees this as a reelection guarantee; the Maloof's see possible admonishment of their debt and developers know their payback will occur right up front.

The number of people who attend King's games is minimal compared to the local population at large. The annual State Fair sees as many people in a single day as the King's do in an entire season and at least the fair visitors are largely from out of town. People do not travel or vacation to Sacramento to see the King's. That idea keeps circulating and it's preposterous. The only out of towners at a King's game are the visiting team.

Placing the arena downtown and thinking you can force people to use public transportation to attend events and a game is another ludicrous concept. Just ask Los Angeles, who has the same sprawl issues we do. You are not going to get people out of their cars for a basketball game.

West Sacramento has responsibly managed growth and development and is poised for a very bright future. This is thanks, in no small part, to our own visionary mayor who doesn't see a need to whine about "strong mayoral powers" to get his job done and done well.

I had heard talk of an amphitheater being built adjacent to Raley Field. This is a fantastic idea that would bring out of town revenue and attention to the west side of the river. Let's keep our eye on what we have here and what we do well and not get bogged down in the hijinx across the water.

Clean up your act

Cleaning and maintenance of the new River City High School campus has been seriously neglected since January. The fleet of Washington Unified School District administrators, including Director of Maintenance Cliff Jones, Assistant Superintendent Scott Lantsberger, and Superintendent of Schools Dayton Gilleland, are all well-aware of the neglect, as is WUSD School Board President Dave Westin.

The problem can be summarized as follows: River City High School is short of enough healthy custodians that show up to work consistently and clean for their entire evening shift. When some of the custodians fail to show up or leave early, which to some extent is inevitable, the cleaning of the campus is partially skipped. The campus is heavily used by nearly two thousand people so it obviously needs to be cleaned daily. At times, buildings on campus have been neglected for up to a week leading to unhealthy, unsanitary conditions. Teachers, students, and the principal have pitched in to clean even though it is not our job to do so. It is clear that an adequate system needs to be put in place for calling substitute custodians. Furthermore, WUSD is much too bureaucratic. The River City principal and vice principal are powerless because they are not given the authority to call in substitute workers or to discipline custodians. The power is unfortunately vested at the district level.

The district administrators are paid handsome compensation packages exceeding $100,000 each, and some approach $200,000. These generous rewards are justified by the argument that administrators have superior talent and yet oddly, they are apparently not clever enough to get RCHS cleaned daily. Also, they are not organized enough to answer e-mails about the problem. In fact, I was told directly by the assistant superintendent that he instructed the director of

MOVIES OF THE WEEK

Battle: Los Angeles (PG-13) — Aaron Eckhart ("The Dark Knight") and his intimidating chin dimple star in the loudest and dumbest film of 2011 (so far). Eckhart plays The Sarge (OK, his name is really Mike, but whatever), a battle-tested Marine who is a member of a platoon filled with Hollywood cliche'd characters charged with kicking some E.T. fanny after the planet is invaded by evil beasties from beyond the stars.

Filmed in glorious Shaky-Cam(tm), the action is incomprehensible, the script — presumably written in crayon — is filled with ham-fisted dialogue, with every line punctuated by a minimum of six exclamation points. It looks like filmmakers were going for a "District 9 Meets Blackhawk Down" vibe, but instead they delivered a ridiculous orgy of Fail.

Red Riding Hood (PG-13) — Speaking of Fail, Amanda Seyfried and her creepy Dakota Fanning Zombie Eyes star in this "Twilight"-ed reimagining of the classic fairy tale. Directed by Catherine Hardwicke ("Twilight" — see? I told you), the story is set in a village in Medieval Times. A werewolf has been a-killin' the townsfolk. Red Riding Hood is stuck in a love triangle and one of her gentlemen admirers just might be Forestburg's Most-Wanted Lycanthrope (psssst ... it's the one who looks like Taylor Lautner). Dull, slow-moving and as brain-dead as an orphan's corpse hanging from a Stupid Tree, only the most-devoted Twitards will enjoy this Renaissance Faire of Awfulness.

Heavy Metal (R) — The most awesome midnight movie of the 1980s is finally getting a Blu-ray release this week, and it's about time. Directed by Ivan Reitman ("Stripes," "Ghostbusters"), based on the adult sci-fi magazine of the same name, and featuring the voices of "SCTV" alumni John Candy, Eugene Levy and Harold Ramis, this anthology of cartoon hot chicks, stoner jokes and amazing stories set to a '80s metal score from bands like Nazareth, Sammy Hagar, Black Sabbath (and more) is 90 minutes of pure nostalgic fun.

The Last Gunfight: The Real Story of the Shootout at the O.K. Corral — and How It Changed the American West
by Jeff Guinn
(Simon & Schuster, $27)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

The shootout in Tombstone, Ariz., on a crisp October day in 1881 is one of the most sensational events in the history of the American West. Although dozens of books have been written about the shootout, much of what we think we know about it is simply not true. For starters, the gunfight didn't happen in the enclosure of the O.K. Corral, but rather at a vacant lot on nearby Fremont Street. More to the point, the event was simply an arrest gone wrong.

Jeff Guinn, a former investigative journalist and award-winning author, serves up a riveting narrative that provides a new take on both the gunfight and the people involved.

According to Guinn, Wyatt Earp was a much more complex man than many historians have assumed. He was arrested for horse theft when he was a young man and broke out of jail while awaiting trial. He worked as a pimp in many of the river towns in Illinois. Later, during his sporadic service as a police officer and deputy marshal in Kansas and Arizona, he remained technically a fugitive from the law. He was never a full sheriff.

Guinn is convinced that in the confusion of the shootout, Wyatt shot and seriously wounded his brother Morgan. He backs up this theory using Wyatt's own diagram of the battle — a diagram included in the book.

The gunfight became in pivotal moment in Western history because, according to Guinn, the "misunderstandings, exaggerations and outright lies about it provided impetus for future generations to form a skewed, one-dimensional view of history." He adds that the event represented an unintentional, if inevitable, clash between evolving social, political and economic forces, though the Earps, Clantons, McLaurys and Doc Holiday had no notion of that when they began pulling triggers.

HOLLYWOOD

The search for the new "Lone Ranger" is over. Not long ago we reported that Johnny Depp was set to play Tonto, the trusted companion of the most famous Ranger ever. Now, the title role belongs to Armie Hammer, who played both Winkelvoss twins in "The Social Network" and will soon be seen in "Snow White" with Julia Roberts, and Clint Eastwood's "J. Edger." "The Lone Ranger" began as a radio show in 1933, spawned movie serials and a TV series starring Clayton Moore and Jay Silverheels. A 1981 film version starring Klinton Spilsbury was a bust.

It seems odd that the 47-year-old Depp aspired to be Tonto and not the Lone Ranger, but he's known for his off-beat role choices. Depp and the films' producer, Jerry Bruckheimer, have been very successful with the "Pirates of the Caribbean" movies and could be planning this as a new franchise. Shooting will begin when Depp completes the new "Dark Shadows" movie, set for a fall 2012 release.

Agatha Christie fans, rejoice! Her favorite novel, "Crooked House," never produced as a telefilm or movie, will start shooting in London this summer. The great Julie Andrews will star with Gemma Atherton, Matthew Goode and Gabriel Byrne. "Crooked House" is budgeted at $20 million, not a lot for a film these days, but then Agatha Christie was the best at creating one-set drawing room mysteries.

Kiefer Sutherland, currently starring in "That Championship Season" on Broadway, will soon be shooting in Northern Ireland and New York for the film "Fairytale of New York," with Kate Bosworth as his leading lady. It's about a cynical but charming Irish standup comic who, while in New York, connects with an intriguing American woman. Kiefer's pilot for a new series will have to wait in the wings as a midseason replacement while he completes this film and "Melancholia."

As we predicted, the four TV netwAs we predicted, the four TV networks have moved away from new reality shows in favor of new dramas and sitcoms. While "Charlie's Angels" made the ABC lineup, "Wonder Woman" did not make NBC's fall schedule. "Law & Order: SVU" was unable to convince Christopher Meloni to return, and has added Jennifer Love Hewett to fill the void. Also, NBC won't restart "30 Rock" until midseason due to Tina Fey's pregnancy. If Tina, who created, writes, co-produces and stars in "30 Rock," wanted time off, all she had to do was ask for it. Maternity leave is an extreme way to get a vacation!

Summer Salsa

When tomatoes and peppers are ripe and plentiful, folks will wonder what to do with all that produce. Salsa is one good option.

How hot the salsa is depends on the kind of peppers that are used. Peppers are rated according to their hotness on a scale called the Scoville Organoleptic Test. The hottest variety is habanero, with a rating of 300,000 Scoville Units. The habanero resembles an orange lantern. Typically, the hotter peppers are smaller varieties (1-3 inches at maturity) and are colored 'green-turning-red.' When working with hot peppers, be sure to wear gloves to prevent burns. Just cutting a habanero open, for example, can make a person's eyes water!

Milder peppers tend to be larger (4-10 inches) and are 'yellow-turning-red.' Examples of milder peppers include Bell peppers and Sweet Banana peppers, which are rated at 0 Scoville Units, and so are very mild. More in the mid-range would be jalapeño peppers. They are rated at 5,000 Scoville Units and are tapered green or red chilies.

Adjust the spiciness of the salsa by selecting the type of pepper added to the mix. For a very mild salsa, use milder peppers. For a very hot salsa, use a greater proportion of hotter peppers to milder ones. Regardless of the product's spiciness, don't just add more peppers to make it hotter. The total amount of peppers should be the amount recommended in the procedure. The proportions are calculated out so that the recipe will be safely preserved.

It also is a good idea to try out the peppers you plan to use in your salsa by trying half of a hot pepper first, stirring the salsa, letting it sit for a few minutes and tasting for heat. See if the temperature is what you expect and what you prefer. It's easier to adjust the mix of peppers in the salsa to gradually make it a little hotter by adding more peppers than it is to deal with an excessively hot and spicy salsa after it's prepared. If someone finds your salsa a bit too hot, you might try serving it with some sour cream or salty chips to help calm that spicy flavor.

This recipe for Spicy Fruit Salsa combines hot peppers and juicy summer fruits. It's perfect for a snack or appetizer and also is delicious as a topping for fish, chicken or pork.

THE KITCHEN DIVA'S SPICY FRUIT SALSA

Salsa is a healthy, versatile condiment. Adding fruit to this traditional salsa recipe gives it a boost of additional healthy nutrients.

- 1 large, firm-but-ripe mango, peeled and cubed
- 1 large, firm-but-ripe peach, peeled and cubed
- 2 large, firm-but-ripe tomatoes, cored, seeded and coarsely chopped; or 16 grape or cherry tomatoes, cut into quarters
- 1 cup diced red onion
- 1 or 2 fresh jalapeños, stemmed and minced
- 3 tablespoons fresh lime juice
- 1 1/2 teaspoons chili powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon honey or agave syrup, optional
- 1/3 cup finely chopped cilantro

1. In a large bowl, combine mango, peach, tomatoes, onion, jalapeños, lime juice, chili powder, salt and honey. Stir well to combine.

2. Cover and refrigerate for up to 1 hour, to blend the flavors. Just before serving, stir in the cilantro and adjust the seasoning. Serve with baked tortilla or pita chips. Makes about 2 cups.

TIP: To reduce the heat of the peppers and retain the flavor, cut the peppers open and remove the seeds and the ribs. Be sure to wear gloves when handling peppers or wash your hands immediately after touching them.
